State Insane and Idiotic Asylum.

DRS. HAWTHORNE & LORYEA,

PHYSICIANS & PROPRIETORS.

IN PURSUANCE OF A LAW PASSED BY THE present Legislative Assembly, the Oregon State Insane and Idiotic Asylum is located in East Portland, in this county, Mr. Hawthorne of Portland, Physician and Surgeon.

The Proprietors of the above Establishment will immediately make additions to their present buildings, in order to offer such accommodations as will ensure entertainment enough to need the care and treatment of an Insane or Idiotic Asylum.

It is specially requested on the part of County Judges, guardians and friends of this class of patients, to have them immediately conveyed to the Asylum, so that they may be properly cared for before the inclement season sets in.

THE INDIGENT WILL BE SUPPORTED AT THE EXPENSE OF THE STATE, and all persons of debt made against them. For further particulars apply to

DRS. HAWTHORNE & LORYEA,

Physicians of the Oregon State Insane & Idiotic Asylum, Portland, Multnomah county, Oct. 10, 1863. 1y

WILCOX & GIBBS

SEWING MACHINE.

We would call attention to the following facts in connection with this Machine, which renders it superior to any other in use:

It forms a flat elastic seam which will not rip in lawn!

It is entirely noiseless!

A patented device prevents it being turned backward.

The needle cannot be set wrong.

Can be used successfully without other instructions than accompany the Machine.

It received the Gold Medal of the American Institute in 1863. For particulars, enquire of

STEWART & COURLEY,

Agents for Oregon, 103 Front street.

ROMANCE OF THE WAR.—The following is from the Detroit Tribune:

We recently learned of a very remarkable incident in connection with the First Regiment of Michigan Engineers and Mechanics, which goes far to illustrate the old proverb, "When a woman will she will, depend on it," &c.

In the fall of 1861, a young man, whose name, it is not necessary to mention, conceived the idea of joining the above-named regiment. He had previously formed the acquaintance of a young girl living in the same village, whose proper name is Marian Green, and, in fact, became enamored of her.

They were engaged to be married, and she protested against his going into the army. He, however, had made up his mind to go and go he did. She threatened to follow, but was finally prevailed upon to remain at home, but only consented after a solemn promise that her "brute boy in blue" would ever cherish and regard her as his affianced. The following December, Marian Green bid good-bye to her lover, at Ypsilanta, having gone there to see him "off for the war."

Letters passed regularly for months between the parties, but Marian grew tired of being absent from her lover, and finally resolved to join him. This time she kept the matter a profound secret. An opportunity was soon offered; and consequently she set her wits to work to accomplish her long-desired wish.

By an arrangement only known to herself and a certain surgeon, she managed to enlist in a detachment that was subsequently recruited for a regiment, and in the summer of 1863, she, together with many other new recruits, joined the main organization, then engaged in rebuilding some bridges on the Memphis and Charleston railroad.

Although Marian had informed her parents that she was going to leave home on a visit to some friends in Illinois, she was soon missed, and inquiries were made concerning her prolonged absence from home. No tidings of her could be learned, and the sorrow-stricken parents remained unaware of her whereabouts until a few days ago, when she arrived home safe and sound, having apparently enjoyed soldier life amazingly. She, owing to her boyish appearance, while with the regiment, managed to avoid the more arduous labors incident to that organization, and by that means was enabled to bear up under the fatigue and exertions of a soldier's life.

As letters written by her lover remained unanswered, save by her parents, he became sad and lonely. Could she have deserted him and eloped with another, after having so frequently reassured him to the contrary? He could not, for a moment, entertain any such idea, that she would eventually prove true to her declarations, he felt no doubt. Strange forbodings, however, crept over his mind, and so worked upon his feelings that in the fall he was taken sick and sent to the hospital.

Imagine his surprise, when, after a day or two, a familiar countenance there met his anxious gaze. It was none other than that of Marian Green! It is unnecessary to repeat all that transpired; suffice it to say that mutual explanations followed, never to reveal the discovery there made. Months followed, and still Marian Green remained in the hospital, kindly nursing the patients. She kept her sex a secret for some time, and would doubtless have done so for the whole term of her enlistment, had not the young man proved recreant to his trust. He wrote a letter to her parents informing them of the discovery, and they soon found means to bring home their long-lost daughter.

She was loth to depart for home, but obedience to her parents rendered it necessary that she should do their bidding, especially since her sex had been discovered.

A few days since, her lover—[illegible] ment had been discharged, came to this city, where she met the idol of her heart. A Justice of the Peace was found on Thursday, and the happy pair were made one. To-day they return home to the little inland town whence they came, with their hearts full of joy and their pockets full of greenbacks.

WHY GENERAL LEE RESIGNED HIS COMMISSION, IN 1861, IN THE U. S. ARMY.—The following letters are published in correspondence which recently appeared in the London Times:

ARLINGTON, Va., April 20, 1861.

Lieut.-Gen. Winfield Scott, commanding United States Army—GENERAL: Since my interview with you on the 18th inst., I have felt that I ought no longer to retain my commission in the army. I, therefore, tender my resignation, which I request you will recommend for acceptance. It would have been presented at once, but for the struggle it has cost me to separate myself from a service to which I have devoted the best years of my life and all the ability I possessed.

During the whole of that time—more than a quarter of a century—I have experienced nothing but kindness from my superiors and the most cordial friendship from my comrades. To no one, General, have I been as much indebted as to yourself for uniform kindness and consideration, and it has always been my ardent desire to merit your approbation. I shall carry to the grave the most grateful recollections of your kind consideration, and your name and fame will always be dear to me.

Save in defense of my native State, I never desire again to draw my sword. Be pleased to accept my most earnest wishes for the continuance of your happiness and prosperity, and believe me, most truly, yours,

ROBERT E. LEE.

A copy of the preceding letter was inclosed in the following letter to a sister of the General, Mrs. A. M.:

ARLINGTON, Va., April 20, 1861.

MY DEAR SISTER: I am grieved at my inability to see you. I have been waiting "for a more convenient season," which has brought to many before me deep and lasting regret. Now we are in a state of war which will yield to nothing. The whole South is in a state of revolution, into which Virginia, after a long struggle, has been drawn, and though I recognize no necessity for this state of things, and would have forborne and pleaded to the end for redress of grievances, real or supposed, yet in my own person I had to meet the question whether or not I should take part against my native State. With all my devotion to the Union, and the feeling of loyalty and duty of an American citizen, I have not been able to raise up my mind to raise my hand against my relatives, my children, my home. I have, therefore, resigned my commission in the army, and

A Rich Opening.

Napoleon the First acquired a taste for creating kingdoms and disposing of thrones; that was summarily disposed of by the allied powers of Europe, when, taking possession of Paris, they arranged the affairs of the Continent to suit themselves—and sent the Emperor to St. Helena. His nephew, true to the policy initiated by "My Uncle," fancies the game of manufacturing Empires, and having succeeded in securing France to himself—not daring to interfere more potently than he has already done in changing the established order of things upon his own continent, and not finding his African dominions productive of sufficient importance to satisfy the restless ambition of the French people—has turned his attention to the land of the setting sun.

Maximilian nominally rules in the Empire of the Montezumas. Maintained by French bayonets, he is called Emperor over an Empire barren indeed of loyalty to his own pretensions, but rich in all the elements of grandeur and power; whose soil and climate rival the choicest spots of earth, and whose people, brought under judicious control by exercise of authority, and of admixture with a more enterprising race, need but time and opportunity to make the products of Mexico build up in wealth at least, a genuine Empire.

Scarce has the soi disant Emperor warmed the seat, that he will some day suddenly abdicate, than the financiering commences, and the first prominent move shows how the game is to be made. California is filled with a restless population, that count by tens of thousands against the national cause: rash enough men, but too prudent to put their lives in jeopardy by warring against the majority that speaks out boldly at the ballot box for peace at home, and for the cause of the Union, but who, no doubt, when the hour and the span shall arrive, will enlist in any cause that promises relief from Federal rule, and wealth and power not far from home.

Maximilian, in recognition of the favors received from France, has bonded, mortgaged or made a grant to France of the States of Mexico adjoining California, Sonora, Sinaloa, Chihuahua, Durango and Lower California are transferred to Napoleon; and, indeed, if Maximilian can hold the remainder of his usurped empire by any easier tenure so disposing of these, he has done wisely, as his heart may thereby with more show of comfort attempt to wear a crown. Napoleon is designing—very likely he cannot help being that, for, as Topsy would say, he was born so. For a long time past he has had covetous eyes upon the Pacific coast, and has cast stolen glances toward California. England has mines of gold in Australia and Cariboo; the United States is blessed with mineral wealth, and to be rich and fashionable, Napoleon should have mines as well. He is only our friend, to the extent that he fears to become our enemy; and this move significant of that same fact.

There is an ancient recipe for cooking a certain, that commences aggely thus: "First catch your dolphin," and acting upon this wise suggestion, the wily Frenchman has sent Gwin, with hook baited with French gold, to catch the needed prize. Gwin is a viceroy. Seeing out with impatience his time of probation in the United States Senate, he has since traveled upon Confederate hopes intent—California was too loyal for him: the United States were too warm for the like of him; the Confederate cause was too hopeless for him; Maximilian and his success rather too uncertain for him; but he is just the man for Napoleon, and the third of that name is just the man for him. Gwin, who left us a plain republican—albeit proud enough at that—has budded and blossomed, eliminated and scintillated, until he comes near home to us again in almost regal state. Vice-regal Gwin!

But there are Mexicans in Sonora and the States beyond, that are on the alert, with the perhaps obsolete idea that they desire no foreign dynasty to rule them. To sum it up briefly, they are—to fall back on the vernacular—"fornenst" Gwin, and therefore the Dolphin is unfit as yet to broil, bake or stew. A pretty kettle of fish for Gwin to commence with. The solution to the riddle is to be simply this. Gwin calculates upon his knowledge of the loving propensity Americans have—and especially the secess Democracy—to try any new invention such men as he may inaugurate. He may not have reckoned amiss; so that the next mail may bring us news of secret gatherings all along the Pacific States and Territories, mounting in hot haste may follow, and the steady stream of disappointed, confederate, peace Democrats may file southward, with a war cry ready to sound whenever they shall reach Sonora, of Gwin and Napoleon, to the rescue! We could view it without a murmur, part with every mother's son of them without a fear; most emphatically would they "leave their country for their country's good," but alas poor Mexico! While our loss would be a decided gain, what a fate would be hers. Such is the programme, and we may look for something of a break up among the chivalry who surround us, should any considerable prosperity attend the exertions of the Viceroy. Though the probabilities are that when the rebellion is wound up, a decree will be entered by our home Government against Gwin and against the Emperor, who, catching the idea of Yankee thrift by pressing American soil, has so soon announced to trade off his not yet acquired possessions.

INSANE LITERATURE.—The Superintendent of the Bloomingdale Insane Asylum in giving evidence upon a case which involved the question whether a person could have done a certain act and be insane, stated that Adler's dictionary of several modern languages was written in the Bloomingdale Asylum by a patient there, and yet it commands place and rank as a standard work, preferred and used in all the principal schools and colleges of the United States; further, he stated that, strange as it sounds, one of the most popular New York ladies was principally edited in the same place, the leading article half the time being written by a patient confined as insane. A contemporary wittily remarks that the public would be very much astonished to believe that only one of the leading New York journals is edited by insane persons.

HARD TIMES AT VICTORIA.—Our neighbors of Vancouver Island complain of hard times, and seem to anticipate commercial failures as a consequence. Cariboo has measurably failed to answer expectations, and the Colonist thinks that the Kootenai and Similkameen can be depended on to bring them speedily relief. It says: "For six years past we have been building upon the sand; and the storm of adversity is now tumbling our houses about our ears." We hope that is an exaggeration of the hard times in the Island colony.

California News.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—A draymen named Mulcahy has been arrested for stealing a ton of coin from the Union Pacific manufactory. He is in custody of the police.

Bounties of the 75th regiment have been paid, and the State account will be soon paid off by county officers. Each volunteer soldier's bounty was given in all that portion of the State.

Michael Brown was fined three hundred dollars for gambling.

Judge Pratt granted Maria Hawkins a divorce from Luther Hawkins, allowing their children to remain in custody.

The Commercial says her final trip to Victoria, commanded by Capt. Baker, Pilot J. M. Donald, Clerk Clark, Chief Engineer Ward and T. M. Anderson have been appointed engineer.

Capt. Robert Murray, of the brig T. B. Lewis, was found dead in his cabin this morning, having died in convulsions.

Four cases of cutlery, consisting of knives with microscopes in the handles, valued at three thousand dollars, were confiscated in the U. S. District Court yesterday.

Three communications are published in the Bulletin to-night, relative to the refusal of the President of the Civil Aid Commission to receive $500 which was raised at a private parties theatrical entertainment given last week. One communication is from President Rodgers, who denies having refused the contribution because it was raised by a theatrical entertainment.

Markets.—Good milling, for coast and other inferior brands, $5@6 50—sales at latter figure; choice, commands 6@6 50; barley, 2@2 75 sales; do., sales at 2 50 per hundred in legal tenders; 500 sacks.

Arrived 7th, H. B. Plummer, 11 days from New York.

The following telegrams were received this afternoon:

SALT LAKE, Feb. 5, 2 P. M.—A party of 200 soldiers, with one piece of artillery, left Mud Springs at 9 A. M. for the east. They intend to follow and rout out the rebels at Julesburg.

The Mail has the following telegram

CAMP STEVENS, Feb. 5, 10 A. M.—Since the last heard from the command has discovered the whereabouts of the Indians. Very few have been seen around here this morning. We think probably they are leaving.

CARSON, Feb. 5, 4:25 P. M.—The Governor this day, approved the Assembly bill authorizing the survey and establishment of the western boundary line between the States of Nevada and California, to commence where the commissioners suspended operations in 1863, near the White Mountains. The bill was introduced by J. S. Hayes, Esq.

SANTA ROSA, Sonoma county, Feb. 5.—A most horrible murder was committed here at 12 o'clock last night by Mike Ryan. He killed his wife with a pick, striking same two or three times on the head with the sharp point. Once it penetrated some four inches just back of the ear. She died in about an hour afterwards, and was unconscious during the time. He had threatened her life during the day, charging her with taking his money. Too much whiskey caused the murder. Ryan is in jail.

Sherman's Progress through Georgia, by an Eye Witness.

AN ORIGINAL CHARACTER.

At this station we came across an old Yankee named Wells, who was the most original character I ever met. He was depot-master in the place when there was a railroad here. He is a shrewd old man, and seemed to understand the merits of the war question perfectly. He said:

"They say you are retreating, but it is the strangest retreat I ever saw. Why, dog bite them! The rebels have been lying in this way all along. They allers are whipping the Federal armies, and they allers fall back after the battle is over. It was the first time I ever opened my eyes. Our army was allers whipping the Feds, and we allers fell back. I allers told 'em it was a d—d humbug, and now, by —— I know it, for here you are right on old John Wells' place; hogs, potatoes, corn and fences all gone. I don't find any fault. I expected it all."

"Jeff. Davis and the rest," he continued, "talk about splitting up the Union. Why, if South Carolina had gone out by herself, she would have been split in four pieces by this time. Splitting the Union! Why, don't you see the State of Georgia is being split through from end to end. It is these rich fellows who are making this war, and keeping such precious bodies out of harm's way. Those John Franklins went through here the other day in a car, with small box at Macon, working for eleven dollars a month, and hasn't got a cent for it—d—d stuff for a year. Eleven dollars a month and served thousand bullets a minute. I don't believe it."

"My wife came from Canada, and I kind of thought I would some time go there to live, but was allers afraid of the ice and cold; but I can tell you this country is getting too cursed hot for me. Look at my fence rails burning there.

"I think I can stand the cold better.

"I heard as how they cut down the trees across the road up country and burn the bridges; why, dog bite their hides, one of your Yankees can take down a tree and carry it off, tops and all; and there is that bridge built across the river in less than two hours—they might as well try to stop the Ogeechee as the Yankees."

The blasted rebels who burnt this here bridge thought they did a big thing; a natural born fool cut in two, had more sense in either end than any of them.

"To bring back the good old times," he said, "I'll take the help of Divine Providence, a heap of rain and a deal of elbow grease to fix things up again."

NEAR THE OGEECHEE.

As the Twentieth Corps entered the town they were met by the Fourteenth, whose head of column arrived at the same moment. While the corps had met with the instructions above mentioned, the army under General Howard were attempting to throw a pontoon across the Ogeechee at the Georgia Central Railroad bridge. Here they met a force under the command of Gen. Wayne, which was composed of a portion of Wheeler's cavalry, militia and a band of convicts who had been liberated from the penitentiary upon the condition that they would join the army.

The most of these desperadoes have been taken prisoners, dressed in their State Prison clothing. General Sherman has turned them loose, believing that Governor Brown had not got the full benefit of his liberality. The rebels did not make a remarkably stern defense of the bridge, for Howard was able to cross the army yesterday, and Logan's command is making a forced march to-day. Infact, all of the army, except one corps, are engaged in this same work. Morgan, with his army, was hardly able to reach this point when he met General Hardee, who has managed to get around here from Macon. Our troops struck the railroad at this station a few hours after the frightened band escaped.

THANKSGIVING DAY KEPT.

We had been told that the country was very poor east of the Oconee, but our experience has been a delightful gastronomic contradiction of the statement. The cattle trains are getting so large that we find difficulty in driving them along. Thanksgiving day was very generally observed in the army, the troops serving chickens in the plenitude of turkeys with which they had supplied themselves.

SUPPLIES AND SCENERY.

Vegetables of all kinds, and in enlarged quantities, were at hand and soldiers gave the rebels to understand, they were not very particular about the size. In truth, so far as the gratification of the stomach goes, the troops are passing a continuous thanksgiving.

In addition to fowls, vegetables and meats, many obtain a delicious syrup made from sorghum, which is cultivated on all the plantations, and stored away in large troughs and hogsheads. The mills here and there furnish fresh supplies of flour and meal, and we beat little or nothing of "hard tack"—that terror to weak digestion. Over the sections I recently have traversed, I find very little cultivation of cotton. The classmates of Davis appear to have been obeyed; and our large droves of cattle are turned mightily into the immense fields of sugar-cane or corn for their fill, while the granaries are crowded to overflowing with oats and corn.

We have also reached the sand regions, so that the fall of rain can be counted upon with sufficient exactness, and would seem to confirm from a Liberal way that Providence, a heap of rain and a deal of elbow grease to fix things up again."

NEAR THE OGEECHEE.

Just before its entrance into Milledgeville Gen. Sherman encamped on one of the plantations of Howell Cobb. It was a coincidence that a Macon paper containing Cobb's address to the Georgians, as General commanding, was received the same day. This plantation was the property of Cobb's wife, who was a Denar.

Everything of any great reputation as a man of society and many virtues, but I could not help contrasting the call upon his fellow-citizens to raise and defend their liberties, hearth, etc., from the step of the invader; to burn and destroy everything in his front, as will hem in all sides, and all that, with his own conduct here, and the

God Save the Flag

Washed on the blood of the brave and the blooming,
Snatched from the attack of the cannon-fires,
Burning with star-fire, but never consuming,
Flash out your folds in the sky and pray!

Flash the portents of dread would rend it,
Angels of peace and lovers pray for its fall;
Thousands have died for it, millions defend it,
Emblem of justice and mercy to all!

Justice that reckons the sky with her terrors,
Mercy that comes with her white-winged train,
Sounding the battle and breaking the clarion,
Borne on the wedge of old human patriots,
Dyed in the life-blood of the bravest-born,
This was the symbol of hope to the nations,
Torn from Abolitionism's foul and flung to the breeze!

God bless the flag and its noble defenders,
White as the foam-flakes o'er the battle-mad wave,
Till the stripes and the stars in the blue of the heaven
Washed from the stains in the blood of the brave!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

AN ITALIAN ANECDOTE.—Charles, Duke of Calabria, in Italy, sat daily in his palace for the administration of justice, assisted by his ministers and councilors of state. He had placed in his hall of tribunal a bell, the rope to which hung in the court-yard in front of his palace.

An old horse who had been abandoned by his master wandered into the enclosure, and rubbing against the rope, it gave a loud pealing sound.

"Open the door," said the prince, "and bid the person enter."

"It is only the horse of the Signor Capice," said the guard, re-entering, and this made the assembly all smile.

"You laugh," said the duke. "Know that justice in my realm shall be rendered even to the animals. Let some one call Capice."

"What is this horse that you have permitted to wander away?" asked the duke of the signor, as he came before him.

"Ah, my prince, he has been a noble animal in his time; he made twenty campaigns under me; but now he is no longer fit for service, and I cannot support him."

"The king, my father, recompensed you well, did he not, for your service?" asked the duke.

"Truly, he did; I was overwhelmed with his benefits."

"And you do not care to nourish this noble animal, which has been so faithful in service to you. Go, find him a place in your stables, let him be treated as well as any of your domestic animals; if you do not I shall never consider you as a loyal cavalier, and shall withdraw from you all the favor I have heretofore shown you."

The discomfited signor retired to obey the mandate of his prince, and the poor horse was never known to wander forth again, but was carefully, even luxuriously, provided for.

A CHILD'S EXPEDIENT.—A little girl about four years old crotted down to Atlantic dock the other day to buy some corn for her mother's chickens. She had a pail in her hand in which to pour the corn, but before she reached the spot where she was accustomed to find it, she came to a cask of honey. This was not to be passed by without an effort to obtain some of it. The men at work within the dock, unobserved by the child, watched her attempts to reach the sweet temptation. Her little arms were too short for the enterprise; but, after a moment's consideration, she took off her shoe and stocking, rolled up her drawers, and climbing up on something against which the cask stood, let down her foot and ankle into the honey; then she drew it up and with her hand scraped off the honey into the pail. This she repeated until the pail was full, when she went to the water side and washed, and replacing her shoe and stocking, started with her pail for home. A man followed her and heard her tell her mother that she had brought home some honey; but to all questioning as to how she obtained it she was mute. In a short time she returned to the dock for her chicken food, when, as I understand, there was quite an excitement over her and a collection taken up to reward her ingenuity—not 'tis to be hoped, to encourage her honesty. Perhaps, though, the little creature thought that honey in a cask is as much the property of whoever gets it as is honey in a tree in the woods.

It is safe to predict that should that child live to become a woman she will have her share of that most useful and much to be desired endowment, "faculty."—Brooklyn, N. Y., Cor. Springfield Republican.

CURIOSITIES OF THE EARTH.—In digging at the city of Modena, in Italy, and about four miles around it, when the workmen arrive at the depth of sixty feet they come to a bed of chalk, which they bore with an augur five feet deep. They then withdraw from the pit before the augur is removed, and upon its extraction the water bursts up through the aperture with great violence and quickly fills this new made well, which continues full, and is affected neither by rains nor droughts. But that which is most remarkable is, that at the depth of fourteen feet are found the remains of an ancient city paved streets, houses, floors and different places of mosaic. Underneath is a soft earth, made up chiefly of vegetable matter; and at twenty-six feet deep large trees entire, such as walnut trees, with walnuts still on the stem, and the leaves and branches in a perfect state of preservation. At twenty-eight feet deep a soft chalk is found mixed with a vast quantity of shells, and this bed is eleven feet thick. Under it vegetables are found again, with leaves and branches of trees as before.

MARRIAGE BAROMETER.—An important discovery has been made by some statistical genius in Chicago, which conclusively proves that marriage, like all other commercial transactions, is controlled by the weather. The Chicago Journal has the following as an excuse for the excessive matrimony in that little town:

"DREADFUL EFFECTS OF COLD WEATHER.—The 'oldest inhabitant' has no recollection of such a wintrish November as the present month. Keen winds, cutting and cold, came hand in hand with November, and have seldom parted company since their advent. The terrible effect of such a state of things is apparent in the matrimonial market. The number of marriage licenses issued this month already reaches two hundred and three, against one hundred and eighty two for the corresponding period last month, and one hundred and forty-five in August.

We sincerely hope that the weather may change in Chicago.

A BOY'S PRAYER.—A Presbyterian clergyman in Northern New York had two smart boys, just old enough, to have inquiring minds, but not to discern the reason of things. They were taught to pray, and the efficiency and need of prayer were daily impressed upon them. Both boys had a patch of "tucket" or "pop corn" in the garden, and the growing blades were watched with intense interest, a small reward being held out to stimulate their industry. One day, the father walking near the patch, heard the voice of the youngest solemnly engaged in prayer, and drawing near listened to the following petition: "O Lord, make my corn grow great big corn, but make brother Sam's grow all little nubbins!"

Mr. Jenkins was dining at a very frugal table, and a piece of bacon near him was so very small that the lady of the house remarked to him, "Pray Mr. Jenkins, help yourself to the bacon. Don't be afraid of it."

"No, indeed, madam—I've seen a piece twice as large, and it didn't scare me a bit."

In the reign of James I, when a person was invited out to dinner, he took his own knife with him, and on entering the house of his host, found a whetstone behind the door on which to sharpen it.

DESTRUCTION OF HUMAN LIFE BY TIGERS.—In Singapore the average mortality caused by tigers has for a long time been calculated at one man a day. The local government have recently made great efforts to drive away these destructive animals. Convicts have been specially employed to hunt them down, and the reward offered for their destruction has been considerably increased. These measures have, to a certain extent, proved successful; but that they have not been altogether so is shown by a statement in a late number of the Straits Times. In a little more than a fortnight, in the month of August last, five men had been killed by tigers, and these were not merely conjectural cases, but cases in which the evidence of the cause of death was indisputable.

In Venango county, Pennsylvania, is a queer fellow by the name of Tom Burton, who drinks and stutters, and stutters and drinks. He has a brother Jim, who is glib of tongue, and was a great liar—we hope he has reformed, for he professed to become a good man, and was baptized in the river. It was a bitter cold day in winter, and the ice had to be cut to make a place for the ceremony. Tom was in attendance and close by. As Jim came out of the water, Tom said to him:

"Is it c-c-c-cold, Jim?"

"No," replied Jim; "not at all."

"D-d-d-dip him again, m-m-minister," cried Tom, "he l-l-lies yet!"

A gentleman who had the marvelous gift of shaping a great many things out of orange peel, was displaying his abilities at a dinner party where Theodore Hook was, and succeeded in counterfeiting a pig, to the admiration of the company. One of the guests tried the same feat, and after destroying and strewing the table with the peel of at least a dozen oranges, gave it up, with the exclamation, "Hang the pig! I can't make one!" "Nay," exclaimed Hook, "you have done more; instead of making one pig, you have made a Dyer."

"Boys," said a village pedagogue, "what is the cause of all this noise in the school to-day?"

"It's Bill Skyes, sir, who is all the time imitating a steam engine."

"Come up here William; if you have turned into a locomotive, it is high time you were switched off."

The domestic relations, precede, and, in our present existence, are worth more than all other social ties. They give the first throb to the heart, and unseal the deep fountain of its love. Home is the chief school of human virtue. Its responsibilities, joys, sorrows, smiles, tears, hopes, and solicitudes, form the chief interest of human life.—Channing.

"Are you fond of Hogg's tales?" we ventured to ask of a gentleman the other evening. "Yes, I like 'em raised, with salt on 'em," was the response. "No, but I mean, have you read Hogg's tales?" "No, indeed," said he, "our hogs are all white or black, I don't think there is a red one among them."

At a wedding recently, when the officiating clergyman put to the lady the question, "Will thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" she dropped the prettiest courtesy, and with a modesty which lent her beauty an additional grace, replied, "if you please."

A musical genius in Dunkirk, France, is educating a collection of poultry in music. He has already taught a beautiful drake to sing like a canary, and is now at work reforming the "cluck, clucks" of a turkey into something of a sweet sound.

"Do you retail things here?" asked a green-looking specimen of humanity, as he poked his head into a shop. "Yes, was the laconic reply. Well I wish you would retail my dog; he had it bit off about a week ago!"

Punch says the other day a lady, while stooping over her sewing machine, got a painful stitch in her side.

LILLIE'S LOCK OPENED
In One Minute.

NEW YORK, September 2, 1861.

F. TILMAN, Esq., 218 Battery street, Between Commercial and Clay, San Francisco.

DEAR SIR: WE NOTICE AN ADvertisement in your daily papers respecting the "security" of the "Lillie" lock. We are aware that you well understand this lock, and, of course, will not allow yourself to be annoyed by such representations. We have just sent for one of our men at the factory, and he, in our presence, opened one of Lillie's best safe locks, after it had been locked and the combination turned on.

By One Blow of the Hammer

Against the knob on the outside, and thereby breaking the cast iron bolt inside.

The whole time occupied in opening the lock was about ONE MINUTE. We would say that we do not wish our friends may not be deceived by false representations, etc.

Respectfully etc.,
A. E TILTON
WM. McFARLAND.

GOLDSTEIN, March 20, 1864.

Messrs. TILTON & McFARLAND, Safe Manufacturers, Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen: From representations made by Mr. Lillie, I was induced to purchase of him one of his

So Called "Fire Proof Safes."

On the 26th of February last, a fire occurred in our block which destroyed a number of buildings, and our own with the rest. We trusted our books, papers and all in the safe. After the fire the so-called "safe" was taken from the ruins, and on opening it we found that

Everything had been Destroyed.

We send you the safe, with what is left of its contents, and you will see that not one of them is legible or strong enough to substantiate our claims. Desiring for ourselves to know how our neighbors fared in the fire, we instituted, McKenzie & Hardy just opening their safe. TILTON & McFARLAND'S fireproof contents were found to be

In Perfect Condition.

This led to further investigation, and we found, to our astonishment, that from the large amount of combustible material in Messrs. McK. & H.'s cellar—such as coal, paint, oil, etc.—their safe was subjected to a much greater heat than that of our own, as being in the lighting business, and had but little in the cellar. There was another of Lillie's safes here subjected to the same fiery ordeal, but we forget in whose.

Very respectfully,
(Signed) GEO. L. CHESBORO & CO
